From the Editor

I was truly touched by how many people have asked about how things are going at the house. One of these days, you will walk by and see our home freshly updated. But sadly, that day is not likely to be before our daughter comes home for the summer as originally planned. We're excited to go pick her up Mother's Day weekend, but not having her room as "swing" space while other spaces are being worked on will pose challenges.

When we signed the roofing contract back in January, I never imagined that scaffolding would not go up until the end of April. But it is up. Of course the actual start date is still pending a report from a structural expert who will hopefully say that the rises and falls of the roof's 100-year-old "character" are not an indication of a serious problem. Preliminary indications are that everything is funky but fine, but I have learned not to get too far ahead of things on this project.

I started out this process pretty sure I wanted to be "in charge" of everything. At this point I realize that will never happen and am definitely grateful for the trusted experts who are fully at the reins now.

Speaking of unplanned setbacks, what an ordeal it has been trying to get this edition of the Bugle printed. Last Friday, I got an email "making sure I knew" that the printer we have used for 25 years has closed. Luckily they were part of a larger company with other facilities and now instead of going down to Northfield, we would now be shuttled one-plus hours north to Princeton.

The new company (whose name I honestly don't even know yet) doesn't have a dedicated delivery person driving all over the metro every day. So, we had to figure out how to get the inserts to Princeton and then the completed edition to our area distributors. If you're reading this then it would seem that things worked out in the end.

But on to more pleasant topics. I finally made it over to check out La Mesa's new liquor license. For now, they are not offering a full bar but are instead offering a limited selection of gin drinks (including G & T -yay!) and margaritas (very cuisine appropriate!) Although I only had the former, my tablemate assured me the latter was very good.

After the long bleak recurring winter, it is such a lift to the spirits to know that patio season may finally be here!

Street Sweeping

Starting April 16 for approximately four weeks, sweeping crews will take care of more than 1,000 miles of city streets in addition to sweeping alleys. To make sure the crews can do the most complete job possible, temporary “No Parking” signs will be posted at least 24 hours in advance to make sure streets are clear of parked vehicles. Drivers need to follow street sweeping parking rules or they may have their cars ticketed and towed to the Minneapolis Impound Lot. To find out which week your street is scheduled to be swept, go to www.minneapolismn.gov/public-works/streetsweeping and click on “street sweeping schedule lookup.” Then the weekend before your week, you can revisit the website to find out which day of the week the street is scheduled to be swept.

BMNA

Your Vision for the Bryn Mawr Neighborhood

What is it that makes Bryn Mawr a good community for you? Is it a community where you enjoy living? Does the community reflect your values? What is more important to you – location or atmosphere? Is it a place where you like to raise your kids or walk your dog? Do you have a personal connection with other people who live here? What makes you feel connected to Bryn Mawr and are you able to call it your own? The BMNA (Bryn Mawr Neighborhood Association) will be addressing these questions in the next few weeks.

Bryn Mawr Board members are very aware of how special the neighborhood is. While the physical location and layout is important, what most people value is the community atmosphere in which we live. We value stopping by the familiar Market for a carton of milk and a Powerball number, we like pausing to chat with neighbors as they work in their garden, we look forward to a game night in a living room. Maybe for you it's a glass of wine and a walk at the Sip and Stroll, a hamburger at your annual National Night Out gathering or a summer gathering in a backyard for music and a beer.

A newly formed working group of the BMNA has started a process to identify a vision for Bryn Mawr that looks out over the next twenty years. This activity serves to name a vision, mission and strategies to guide the BMNA as we work to create and maintain the kind of community we choose to live in. The vision, mission and strategies will be crafted in the next year and be presented to the City as a formal vision for the neighborhood. It is meant to identify what is important to the people of the neighborhood and take a position with the City as a response to the changes coming.

This workgroup activity is an attempt to continue those efforts the BMNA has taken for its 43 years of existence. The BMNA has past successes, including writing bylaws that lay out the organization's purpose and what we strive for to preparing formal documents to create the kind of environment we want to live in. Over twenty years ago, in 1995, the BMNA form created a comprehensive plan for the neighborhood that supported our strategies to use the newly initiated Neighborhood Revitalization Plan (NRP). The NRP was a city-funded project to allocate taxpayer funds directly to neighborhoods to be used to further the health and development of Minneapolis neighborhoods. Bryn Mawr used its funding to support housing improvements, development of the "downtown" area, traffic safety improvements and park development among other projects. This Bryn Mawr group included over 35 people and four organizations that came together to create the plan document. The Comprehensive Plan is available on the BMNA website.

In 2003, another group of neighbors and support staff came together to create a Land Use Plan to articulate a common neighborhood response to development changes in the neighborhood. The Land Use Committee met for many years to review zoning variances and city plans that affected Bryn Mawr.

Our intention is to build on our past planning efforts. While being attentive to the physical aspects of Bryn Mawr as a neighborhood, this process will also create a vision of the kind of community we intend to live in. The BMNA Board will introduce this process at this year's (2019) Annual Meeting on May 8. We intend to complete this process in one year and present a completed document at the 2020 Annual Meeting. If approved, it will be presented to the City and as a guide for Bryn Mawr community development in the future.

The documents that have already been created will be used as guidelines; we will update and expand from there. This includes referencing the six Topic Areas, which are based on those in the original Comprehensive Plan:

- Richness of Community
- Neighborhood Focus and Activity in its Retail Setting
- Neighborhood within a Park
- Neighbors Active and Safe in the Neighborhood
- Neighborhood with Access to Life-long Learning
- Neighborhood that's Easy to get Into and Around

For this activity to be successful we invite the kind of participation that went into writing the initial Comprehensive Plan and Land Use Plan. We will use our e-mail list, website, Facebook page, Next Door, individual interviews and community meetings as some of the avenues to gather ideas and priorities.

You can start your participation by attending the Annual Meeting on May 8th at Bryn Mawr Elementary at 6:00, by contacting Karen.Frederickson@bmna.org or by completing the survey on our neighborhood web site at bmna.org.

Bryn Mawr welcomes your ideas and participation.

Milkweed for Monarchs

Saving Monarchs One Milkweed Plant at a Time

Growing up, I remember my mom’s milkweed garden as a summer resort for scores of monarchs. It was a spectacular sight. I also remember my 10-year-old brother swinging his tennis racket at the monarchs as they perched in the milkweed and how sadly the next year, they didn’t return.

Looking back, I see both events impacting my view of monarchs; they are beautiful yet fragile creatures.

This past Spring, my wife took my daughter Greta and I out by the pond in our backyard. There she began to search for milkweed plants. When she found one, she would carefully turn the leaves over to see if she could find these tiny white specks, and I had no idea that they were monarch eggs. We carefully collected multiple milkweed plants and placed them in a small insect/butterfly habitat to watch them grow. Over the next few weeks, we would check on the eggs daily. From the eggs would hatch a small caterpillar, depending on the amount of milkweed available to eat

Nationally, the monarch populations have fallen off a cliff – the loss of food, warmer climate and pesticides are the cause of this according to the US Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS). What is happening to these magnificent creatures in their yearly 3000-mile migration to Mexico? What can be done to keep the monarchs returning to Minnesota in big numbers?

The state of Minnesota is doing its part by promoting pollinator-friendly yards. The Legislature is now considering subsidies for homeowners who convert lawns to clover and wild flowers.

Homeowners can also step up as neighborhood gardens have become critical habitat for the monarch. This spring as you plan your garden think about planting milkweed. Milkweed is not only a wonderful wildflower, it is also the sole host plant for monarchs. Growing milkweed plants in your garden not only affords color and fragrance, it also is a small step to help save monarch butterflies. Hey...It can mean more hummingbirds, too.

(Mad about my brother’s actions? To this day my brother, who is now an adult, regrets batting away those monarchs and holds a deep appreciation for the environment and its stewardship.)
