WinterFest 2021

And like that, it's a wrap! The third annual WinterFest could have been called SpringFest but that's March in Minnesota for ya'. There was luminary making led by the Minneapolis Nature Preschool at Bryn Mawr Elementary. The PTA was selling cocoa and coffee. Kites were flying high in the meadows. Music was played and sparklers were lit at La Mesa. Marshmallows roasting over open fires and friendly faces under masks could be found throughout the neighborhood. Thank you to our wonderful volunteers and the many businesses that donated raffle items.

The City launched a website that offers information and updates around the upcoming trial of former Minneapolis Police Officer Derek Chauvin, who is charged with murder in the death of George Floyd.

City information and links to partners in the new web section will help residents, businesses and others:

- Find current street closures.
- Sign up for trial updates from MN District Court.
- Report suspicious activity.
- Look up mental health and well-being resources for support during traumatic times.

You can also explore ways to prepare and stay informed, learn about security preparations and updates during the trial, follow impacts to traffic and transportation, and find public data on the officers involved.

How to contact the City:

Call 311 for non-emergency City information.
Call 911 for life safety emergencies requiring police, fire or emergency medical services.

Call the MPD Tips Line at 612-692-TIPS (8477) to report suspicious activity not requiring an immediate response.
Businesses and property owners can call 612-673-2499 with questions about advanced preparation before the trial, business operations during the trial and general information about regulations and resources.
The web page will be updated as new information becomes available and as situations change. The BMNA will pass along updates as we receive them via this email list, our Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and NextDoor accounts but for the most up to date 24/7 information please refer to the city website where you can subscribe to updates.

Other Resources

The BMNA encourages you to seek out other resources for support during the trial. The December 2020 issue of the Bugle which can be read here has a list of organizations led by and supporting the BIPOC community on page 9. The Legal Rights Center is another good resource for understanding the trial and the issues surrounding it.

Charter Amendment

Community safety and police brutality have become focal points in Minneapolis and around the country in the past year especially. Several groups have started to envision what a safe community for all looks like where violence prevention is front and center. There are 3 proposals right now to restructure the Minneapolis Police Department. The city charter can be amended two ways: by an ordinance which requires the unanimous vote of the City Council and the Mayor, or by a ballot question. An amendment makes it to the ballot one of three ways: by either a citizen petition with signatures equaling 5% of the votes cast from the last election, by submission from the City Council after a non binding review by the Charter Commission, or by the Charter Commission.

The first proposal, the Public Safety Amendment, would abolish the Minneapolis Police Department as a city department, eliminate the requirement to maintain a minimum number of officers, and greatly reduce the mayor's responsibility and accountability for law enforcement. The new Minneapolis Department of Public Safety would be modeled after the MN Department of Public Safety and would report both to the Mayor and the City Council instead of the current model of reporting only to the Mayor. The Department of Law Enforcement would be one of the departments in the Department of Safety and would employ peace officers. It is a slightly revised version of the proposed amendment from last year that was sent to the Charter Commission who rejected it citing the short timeline leading up to the November 2020 elections. City Council is working on further ordinances to clarify the functions, leadership, and operations of the department. The Charter Commission is reviewing this proposed amendment and will recommend to the City Council that they move forward, reject, or replace with an alternative amendment by August. Their recommendation is not binding. It would be up to the City Council to move forward with putting it on the ballot. The Mayor would also review the proposed amendment and could veto a City Council vote which could then be overruled by a 9 vote decision at City Council.

A second proposal is being brought forth via a people's petition by a coalition group called Yes 4 Minneapolis. This campaign is made up of members such as Reclaim the Block, Black Visions, Minnesota Federation of Teachers, ACLU, Take Action MN, Pollen, Jewish Community Action, Coalition of Asian American Leaders, Little Earth and others. Their amendment would also replace the Police Department with a Department of Public Safety which would include licensed peace officers. There would not be a minimum number of peace officers required. The Department would report to a Commissioner, nominated by the Mayor and appointed by the City Council. This amendment would be on the ballot in November if it gathers enough in person signatures by May 1. Their website states that their motion was developed through a community input process and that they are working with City Council and the two proposals are not in conflict. Both proposals focus on integrating public health and safety. More information can be found at yes4minneapolis.org

A third proposal would create a new Civilian Police Accountability Commission (CPAC) that takes oversight of the police department away from the Mayor. This effort is being led by the Twin Cities Coalition for Justice 4 Jamar. The CPAC would be made up of 13 elected members elected for 4 year terms and who have experience serving and advocating for those most impacted by police crimes. This amendment would be on the ballot in November if it gathers enough in person signatures by May 1. More information can be found on their website sites.google.com/view/tcc4j/home

The Charter Commission is also considering a change of its own, not to the Police Department but to the leadership structure of the city that would restructure the relationship between the Mayor and the City Council. One option would give the Mayor more power and better define the role of City Council. Another would create a position of City Manager as a go between the Mayor and the Council. Another option is to clarify the duties and responsibilities of city government. These changes being discussed do not alter the Police Department.

Stay tuned for more updates and learn more about these important issues on your own. The issue will likely be part of the upcoming City Council election, and you may want to ask the candidates what they think about the options. The League of Women Voters recently hosted a talk on the city charter and the proposed amendments. # From the Editor

After spending so much time at home alone, I have sadly become one of those people who yells at the TV. Tonight, I was yelling at the Hill Murray hockey dad talking about how unfair it is that their team had to drop out of the state hockey tournament because of a Covid exposure. Instead of being grateful for having a season at all (when performing arts student had to completely give up theirs) they were mad because they had to follow the rules they agreed to at the start of the season.

But the rules are slowly adapting to new circumstances. I am happy to report that I have both doses of the vaccine on board and am forging ahead with plan a for a robust in-person summer youth program. We are projecting that it will be safe by June to be in small groups outside and we are even planning a musical that hopefully will be performed for a live audience.

The anniversary of the shutdown passed. We look back and recall thinking it would last a week or maybe a month. Many have died, had life altering disruption and/or financial disaster. I've missed live theatre, dining in restaurants and hugs (oh how I have missed hugs.) If I had a kid playing hockey, I would miss that too. But they all seem like petty inconveniences compared with all the loss that others have endured.

The true reality check came this past week as I watched in horror the testimony of the witnesses to the death of George Floyd at the hands of Derek Chauvin. I am so fortunate to have never seen anything like this and am completely devastated just by watching and listening to the video recordings. I wonder what I would have done had I been at the scene as Mr. Floyd lay dying and crying out for help. Would I have felt anger? Fear at the sight of a police officer being so dispassionate? To hear that an off-duty first responder recognized that immediate medical attention was needed and was dismissed is mind boggling. To hear children and adults express guilt that their efforts could not save his life absolutely breaks my heart.

I cannot believe it. I cannot believe it because it would never happen to me. I have never had reason to fear the police and the sad reality is that black, indigenous and people of color are all to familiar with seeing their people being treated as less than human.

After all we have been through together, I hope that we emerge from this pandemic wiser, more empathetic and more willing to see our common humanity.

Update: 2800 Wayzata Blvd Development

The property most of us know as the CenturyLink Building at 2800 Wayzata Blvd will become a campus of rental apartments and townhomes. On the west side of the property, Lupe Development will deliver 100 units of affordable one or two bedroom senior apartments in a six-story building (The Theodore) and 100 units of market-rate senior apartments (The Eloise) in another six-story building. See Photo 1.

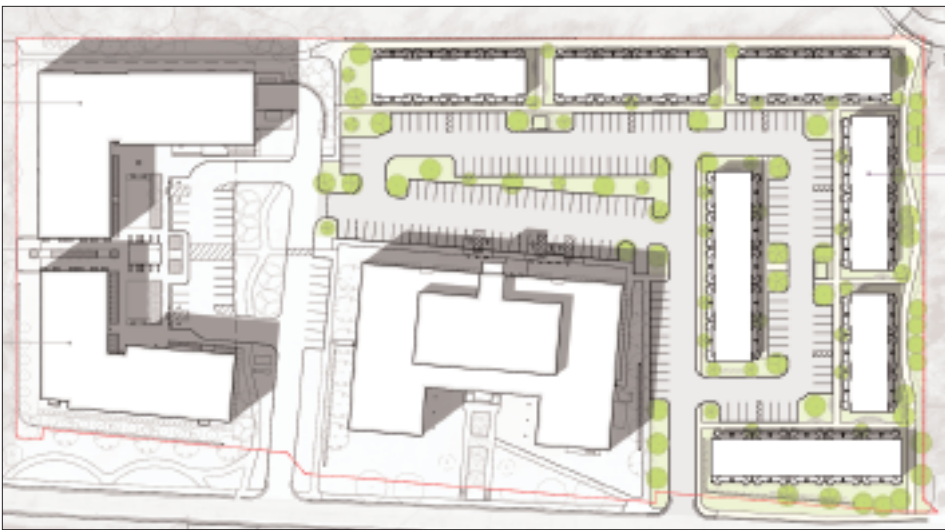

Swervo Development updated their development plans at the March 10th BMNA Board Meeting. The CenturyLink building will be rehabbed into a six-story apartment building. Two stories will be added to allow for about 120 rental units, mostly studios and one-bedroom apartments. See Photo 2. The sixth story (slightly visible) will contain amenities shared by the building. While the senior apartments will share underground parking, the CenturyLink apartment building and townhomes will have surface parking.

Swervo will also move forward with plans to build 60 townhomes for rent, mostly on the perimeter of the eastern side of property. See Photo 3. The townhomes will be in groups of 6, 8 and 10 in seven buildings set back from property lines by 20 or 30 feet. Each townhome will be 3 stories, 3 bedrooms and 2.5 baths. All of the units will have a rear door at ground level with a small porch and surface parking in front. An initial design was presented. See Photo 4. Landscaping for the entire property will be designed to create a high-end feel that will be attractive to renters. Efforts will be made to preserve as many of the existing trees as possible. A natural landscape buffer along the Upton Ave S property lines will be added for privacy. A walking path along the Upton property line will connect to the trail off of Mt. View leading into Wirth Woods.

Both Swervo and Lupe properties will be managed by a property management company. Construction is planned to begin this summer. Efforts will be made to coordinate all construction to minimize disruption to the neighborhood. A new traffic study will be done to reflect the impact of the townhomes.

Neighbors on the 600 block of Upton Ave S most impacted by the development provided written feedback to Swervo Development and the BMNA on March 16. Kevin Thompson, President of the BMNA, and Lisa Goodman, Ward 7 City Council Member, met with the developers on March 18 to discuss the plans and make recommendations. Swervo is improving on the design after neighborhood input. The BMNA looks forward to continued discussion. Everyone is welcome to attend BMNA Board Meetings on the second Wednesday of each month to follow developments. Check the agenda published on Monday or Tuesday before the meeting in the BMNA Coordinator's email newsletter and on NextDoor, Facebook and Twitter.

Racial Covenants in Bryn Mawr

Beginning in the early 20th century racially restrictive covenants were recorded by developers and property owners in a home's legal title. They prohibited Black, Indigenous, People of Color and, in some cases, Jewish people from purchasing, renting and/or residing on a property. As a result of these covenants, BIPOC communities were forced to live in segregated areas of Minneapolis that have historically, and currently, had more environmental hazards, less parks and green space, less access to hospitals and health care, fewer grocery stores, and under funded schools. In 1968 Congress passed the Fair Housing Act making these covenants illegal, however they still exist on the deed record. There are approximately 70 properties in the Bryn Mawr neighborhood with racial covenants in the deeds. Although these covenants are no longer enforceable their impact still shapes the composition of the city, making it one of the most segregated in the nation.

Homeownership is one of the greatest ways to accrue and inherit wealth, however disparities in housing and homeownership serve to further the racial wealth gap and segregation. When equal housing opportunities are denied so are opportunities to create generational wealth. A 2020 study conducted by Redfin, a real estate brokerage, finds that only 25% of Black families in Minneapolis own their home, the lowest among all metro areas in the U.S. www.redfin.com/news/black-homeownership-rate-across-united-states/. This disparity is largely due to Minneapolis's history of racial covenants.

The good news is that there are organizations addressing this form of systemic racism head on: Mapping Prejudice (mappingprejudice.org) has joined up with Just Deeds (minneapolismn.gov/government/departments/attorney/just-deeds/) to provide homeowners with free assistance in having these covenants discharged. We strongly encourage all Bryn Mawr residents to explore these resources and to take this opportunity to remove any racially restrictive covenants that may exist on your property. We also urge you to share this information with other Minneapolis residents. If you are looking for more ways to get involved with this project, Mapping Prejudice is still in need of volunteers to read through deeds in neighboring counties. You can find more information on their website.

Some may be wondering why is it important to have these covenants discharged if they are no longer enforceable. Not only is it necessary to understand who has directly and indirectly benefited from these historically racist practices, but also how such practices have shaped access to real estate, which largely impacts access to wealth, health and education. As a majority white neighborhood we have the opportunity to take action by removing these vestiges of our racist history so that future homeowners do not have to take on this burden. If you are seeking ways in which to take direct action in dismantling systemic racism, this is an excellent first step.

Join us for the second in a series of authors talk with Anthony R. Scott, contributing author of The Scott Collection and the new book Minnesota’s Black Community in the 21st Century which recently won the R.

Wayne Pace Human Resource Development book of the year award. This is a monthly discussion with this month’s guests; Reese Dyer, Shirlee Callender and Rose MaGee who will discuss their work experiences, community connections and other ventures.
Minnesota’s Black Community in the 21st Century shines a spotlight on African American individuals and organizations who are helping to build a better Minnesota. Continuing the tradition established by the pioneering books published by Walter R. Scott Sr. in the 1950s, ’60s, and ’70s, the Minnesota Black Community Project highlights the contributions of contemporary black Minnesotans in the fields of the arts, beauty and fashion, community service, education, entertainment, finance, government, labor, law and law enforcement, media and communications, medicine and health care, religion, social services, sports, science and technology, and more. Through a collaborative effort of writers and photographers, the book profiles men, women, and youth from throughout the state and examines the myriad ways in which the black community is engaged in Minnesota politics, business, and culture. Providing a snapshot look at African Americans today, the book offers inspiration for the future and looks forward to where we are heading. This program is presented in partnership with the Sabathani Senior Center and sponsored by the Friends of Hennepin County Library.
