From the Editor

T's back to school time. For me that means workshops, trainings and on-boarding new staff. It also means making connections by attending school open houses. This year, Bryn Mawr and Anwatin are doing theirs at the jointly. This is not the first year they have had their welcome back events on the same night and time, but it is the first time in memory that they have done it on purpose!

It is nice to see a renewed commitment to collaboration and community-building between the two schools. I've always thought of them as one campus, but somehow they have often functioned in distant silos.

Community Education will be more visible at both schools in Bryn Mawr this year. The expansion of the Adult Enrichment program at North High School means that there is capacity to hold a couple classes at Anwatin this fall. This includes the wildly popular Pickleball Open Gym, Mondays 5:45-7:00pm. There will be one 4-week session starting Oct. 2 and another 6-week session starting Nov. 6. You can register at mplscommunityed.com. (Hurry if you're interested. Registration opened August 31!)

The Beacons Youth Enrichment program which has been at Anwatin for many years, also has additional capacity this year and will be starting after school classes at Bryn Mawr Elementary. This is an exciting development that parents have been wanting for a long time. Since Bryn Mawr is an early start school, they dismiss at 2:00. This is a real challenge for families wanting activities for their little ones until their workday ends.

I don't know yet exactly what the program will look like (how many days, etc.) but the first step is finding people who want to share their talents with young people who are available in the afternoon.

Community Education is looking for talented staff to teach afterschool classes at Bryn Mawr and Anwatin. If you have a passion that you are interested in sharing with students, contact the coordinator, Wendell at Wendell.Johnson@mpls.k12.mn.us.

Thumbing through this Bugle each month, I am struck by the diverse talents and interests of the people who live here. I can imagine all kinds of classes that kids would love, like arts & crafts, gardening, languages, cooking, sports, photography and so much more. I hope you are starting to see yourself or someone you know in this picture and can help our community schools grow to meet this new opportunity!

Save Democracy -Empower Young Voters!

This is the fifth in a series of six articles about the 2023 Minneapolis City Election, brought to you by the League of Women Voters Minneapolis.All articles available at lwvmpls.org/for-voters oung Americans have been gathering strength and exerting more influence in recent elections but need help realizing their full political force as voters. For the health of our democracy, we want them to do so. While, historically underrepresented at the polls, more 18-29 year-olds voted in the 2020 presidential election nationally than in 2016, close to 50%. Even 2022 midterm turnout was better than expected, inching toward 30%.A positive trend but a far cry from the electoral clout the second-largest age demographic in the U.S. could have.

Generation Z (for Zoomer) are those born between 1997 and 2012, with Gen Z young adults expected to make up 17% of all eligible voters by 2024 and 35% by 2036. Combine Zoomers (sometimes called Plurals) with their older siblings and largest generation, Millennials, and the Brookings Institution expects them to account for a majority of all potential voters within this decade and 60% by 2036. It benefits us all that they are civically educated and engaged.

Pew Research Center describes our youngest voting block as more racially and ethnically diverse, progressive, and with positive attitudes toward government. Research also proves Gen Z's low voting numbers are not due to a lack of interest on their part. Studies from CIRCLE, the Center for Information & Research on Civic Learning and Engagement at Tufts University's Tisch College, consistently show that outreach, even one interaction, correlates with higher youth voting. When that doesn't happen, barriers for young voters particularly first-time voters - remain in place, perhaps for a lifetime. Although highly concerned about the issues in the 2022 midterms, less than half of the young voters CIRCLE surveyed were ever contacted by any civic or political organization, canditheir first election as an 18-year-old. They can register right at the polls on Election Day or get the ball rolling by checking the box on their State ID or driver's license application, a form nearly every 16-year-old is itching to fill out! By next year, it will be automatic.

Understanding that classes and work schedules may conflict with voting on Election Day, Minnesota offers early voting, and absentee ballots are the solution for college students away from home. There Secretary of State has a helpful College Students Fact Sheet at www.sos.state.mn.us. These policies have paid off with 15% more young voters in 2020 than the national average.

However, that still leaves a big segment of the Minnesota youth vote on the table with too many teens and young adults in the dark about registration and voting options.

This is a shame because the Minneapolis high school students we met have strong feelings about the issues facing them and this country and want a say in what happens. Their top two concerns, overwhelmingly and across gender and ethnic lines, were the livability of the planet and the rights of all humans. Climate change, pollution, deforestation, and biodiversity loss came up in nearly every conversation, including mentions of specific regions of vulnerability and pipeline controversies. These young people were well-informed and passionate. They cared deeply about vulnerable groups calling for protections of LGBTQ+ rights, policies to end racism and women's inequality as well as the restoration of reproductive healthcare. They expressed concern for immigrants' rights and the Indigenous community.

Close behind were quality of life issues, with safety leading the conversation. These students were clearly fed up with the specter of gun violence, being scared in their schools and communities, including a lack of trust in the Minneapolis police department. Concerned about the homeless, affordable housing, and safe and reliable transportation, they value their education as key to a successful life. They criticized book banning and called for free/affordable college.

They also displayed a pretty good "baloney" detector, so politicians beware. Your young constituents and future voters reject unfulfilled promises and lies. They demand honesty, credibility, and adherence to the law from those who make them. Civically educating and empowering this sleeping giant of a voting block cannot begin too early, and a good example is invaluable. Several students told us they would vote because their families do. CIRCLE offers many ideas to grow the youth vote at circle.tufts.edu, and its research reminds us of the power of even a single interaction encouraging a new voter. When it comes to the power of the vote, you can pay it forward with information and guidance, and LWV Minneapolis is here to help. Our democracy depends on it.

Voter outreach, education, and access to the ballot is the primary mission of the League of Women Voters. Locally, LWV Minneapolis holds voter registration drives twice yearly in the city's high schools. In our unscientific survey of the students we met this past spring, the barriers to voting they cited match some nationwide responses. Although a few said they doubted their vote would matter, most said they simply didn't know how to vote, were confused about registering, needed information about candidates, or were unaware of their eligibility.

The great news is the North Star State has made voting easier, rather than harder, while still securing elections. Sixteen and 17-year-olds can pre-register to be ready to vote in

Bryn Mawr Bikes...to Dinner

Joshua Nichols, Area 4, Active Transportation Committee

Degan my past article with a bit of devil's advocacy, however biking to dinner is just such a pleasant experience that it's difficult to come up with reasons why not to. On a nice day, you get to be out and present in your neighborhood. When you get to your destination, you have a sense of satisfaction with a great appetite and calories to spare in your diet.

Getting to dinner on a bike is also a great way to stay local. Those who use their bicycles to get to dinner know that local is best for neighborliness, friendliness and often taste. Folks in our neighborhood are blessed with access to plenty of great places to eat within a 15 minute ride and often on safe bicycle infrastructure.

The ride:

September 16th, we will be riding to Mill Valley Market on the Theodore Wirth PKWY trail. At 5:00PM we will meet at the corner of W Laurel Ave and Cedar Lake Rd S by the Peace Garden.

We will ride west on Cedar Lake Rd to where it turns into N Wayzata. We will ride down N Wayzata to Theodore Wirth PKWY where we will ride north to Loppet's Trailhead building where Mill Valley Market is located.

Mill City Market has a great patio and an indoor space. They have a great menu of food and drinks for all ages and diets, but also feel free to bring your own picnic from home. The goal of this ride is for everyone to be successful. We will ride as a group for safety and to ensure everyone feels welcome. Please bring a helmet, a bike lock (or be ready to sit at the patio to keep an eye on your bike) and your family and neighbors.

Hello Neighbors and Friends,

I'm excited to share that my colleagues are hosting a Human Library event on Saturday, October 14, 2023 from 10:00am – 2:00pm at the Minneapolis Central Library.

Many of you have urged us to do this. It's finally happening!

What is the Human Library?

he Human Library concept originated in the year 2000 in Copenhagen, Denmark where readers could check out "books" (human beings) for conversation.

The Human Library is designed to build a positive framework for conversations that can challenge stereotypes and prejudices.

The Human Library is where difficult questions are expected, appreciated and answered. The Human Library has been hosted in more than 80 countries.

How do I get involved?

We are looking for people to break down stereotypes and engage in dialogue with strangers about your own identity and lived experiences. As a volunteer "book" you will need to be comfortable having conversations with people you don't know, have transportation to Minneapolis Central Library, and be able to provide references. There will be a Zoom training for "books" on a date to be determined.

If you are interested in being a Human Book for this event, please submit this form by September 17: https://forms.office.com/g/njZbua7XMv Library staff will be in contact with you for next steps.

What if I still have questions?

- Take a look at this 3-minute YouTube video to see a Human Library in action: https://www.youtube.com/watch?
- v=1ioz1XDDMCEReview the The Human Library Book FAQs at humanlibrary.org.
- Library staff are available to answer your questions via email: Paris at pkoehler@hclib.org and Kyle at korcholski@hclib.org.

You all have stories and experiences to share. I hope you will consider getting involved in Hennepin County Library's Human Library!

A Message From Your Crime Prevention Specialists...

In the past few weeks, we have noticed an increase in burglaries to garages citywide. In many cases, access was made through a garage service door. In some cases, a garage opener was stolen from a car parked outside, and then used to open the garage door. Typically, bikes, tools, and/or lawn equipment were reported stolen.

What you can do:

Always keep your garage locked and take additional steps to further secure valuable items inside your garage. Consider storing expensive bikes inside your home or locking them to a stationary object in your garage.

If you park your car outside, lock your doors and do not leave your garage remote inside your car. Carry it in with you or secure it inside your home.

Having all exterior doors be solid core (wood or steel) with a deadbolt, at least a 6-inch strike plate, and 3inch screws going into the frame, make it harder for the door to be pried open or kicked in.

Alert your neighbors and block club members to this increase in burglaries and be sure to watch out for one another.

Call 911 to report criminal activity such as individuals walking down the alley looking into parked cars, trying to open car doors, looking into garage windows, or lurking near service doors.

Record all serial numbers of equipment such as bikes and tools and any guns you might have. If an item does NOT have a serial number, etch, or mark your items with your name or other identifying marker and take a picture of the item. Having this information in case you are the victim of a burglary may greatly help in getting the item returned or tracking potential suspects. Increase lighting in the alley and around your home. Motion lights are helpful. Cameras can also be helpful in the investigation process.

MPD announces engagement sessions on reform implementation, new implementation information webpage inneapolis Police Chief Brian O'Hara is announcing a new webpage for community feedback on the City of Minneapolis' website and is inviting community members to a series of community engagement sessions for public input on policy and procedures.

Community members are encouraged to participate and give their vital input in this reform process agreed upon between the City and the Minnesota Department of Human Rights (MDHR). Public input and community engagement are essential to ensure the police department reflects the values of our community.

MPD Community engagement webpage

The new community engagement webpage is one way for residents to participate in this process. The page has a searchable list of policies, which can be viewed in multiple languages. Visitors will find a link to provide feedback on individual policies and the ability to comment on general topics within the feedback form. The webpage also hosts a calendar of upcoming community sessions, information regarding timelines, a summary of the investigation conducted by the MDHR, and data analysis of both crime statistics as well as feedback received from the public.
