SHREK - A Big Bright Beautiful World at Anwatin Middle School!

On May 29 and 30, 2015, a cast and crew of 65 of Anwatin Middle School's 6th, 7th and 8th grade students inspired and entertained audiences with performances of the comedy Shrek The Musical. This year's show was full of energy and showcased some amazing talent!

Local Bryn Mawr youth featured in the cast were Jack Stillman (Area 3) who played Donkey, Rose Andersen (Area 3) as one of the Three Little Pigs, Meghan Abel (Area 5) as Goldilocks, and Abby Smith (Area 6) as Pinocchio.

Students rehearsed every day for eight weeks with professional artists, quality sets, costumes, sound and lighting. The school musical is one of the key ways in which Project SUCCESS helps students build confidence, gain new experiences, and learn more about themselves and each other through the power of theater.

Working hand-in-hand with students at Anwatin Middle School since 2000, Project SUCCESS has produced yearly school musicals. Shrek was the 15th show at the school! Thank you to everyone who came to see the show.

Adoption of policies (Records Retention, Competitive Bid)-Explained by Vice President Wiley. Asked for questions and received none. Dennis moved, seconded and passed. Additional Corporate Credit Card-Easier for Patty. Purchases still will require preapproval. Dennis moved, seconded and passed.

Discussion of office re-location in Uptown Community space vs. save money with smaller space at current location. Dennis reported-BMNA is using some services but not the office space. New Uptown Community space could be alternative. It would give us an address and space for a phone. At current location, we can change from an office space to a cubicle. We would have some storage, an address, and a location for a phone. Dennis suggested we supply the Uptown space with a projector and screen and put in Wi-Fi. The officers met to discuss and recommend that at this time we downsize to the cubicle space at the current location. Con-future plans not completely known, may not get what we need, non- HC toilet in basement with poor access down poorly designed stairs. The toilet and stairs could be up-graded. Difficult parking downtown. Pros-Connecting with Areas 1 & 2 by having space in office building on Wayzata Blvd. Neither space would be used for Board Meetings, only for committee meetings or work areas. The City has no problem with BMNA working with a business owner.

6. Memorial Bench update: Kathryn Kaatz

Liability is arranged for church to be custodian and will maintain it. BMNA will be fiscal agent and invoiced for expenses. There is a design of stone bench, engraving and landscaping. $7100 for everything including landscaping, $2500 shy of funds. The Committee is contacting UPS for financial support since they originally pledged $10,000 for former plans. Drawings will go up in the church's foyer for fund raising. September 27th is the anniversary of the shooting. "Memorial of Hope and Healing" has been replaced with new design.

7. Bugle Report: JoEllyn Jolstad

Color in The Bugle has encouraged more advertisers. The goal is have enough content for 16 pages. Need Board Members to volunteer to write articles for The Bugle. A sign-up sheet was passed around.

8. Standing Committee Reports

From the Editor

My guess is, that if I looked back at every column I have ever written for the July Bugle, it would say this is my favorite edition. That's because July is the annual Bryn Mawr Bugle salute to graduates.

It is so great that we have a print publication where we can honor the accomplishments of the youth in our neighborhood. Where else can you live in the city, where parents can see a photo of their graduate and write some loving words to send them off on an adventure? This year, I couldn't even fit them all on one page, so I am feeling double the joy.

I also feel like this communal celebration is more important than ever. Back when I was growing up, neighbors actually knew more about each other's lives and milestones. The kids spent summers hanging out in common yards and playgrounds, they went to the same schools and spent what seems to me like more time together.

Now, young children go to more structured pre-schools or play environments and are more likely to meet children from other parts of the city than the the ones down the block. Community schools have been supplanted by choice and face-to-face time with Social Media.

Even I was surprised to learn of some of this year's graduates and I bet they don't all know each other.

My high school reunion is in a couple weeks. I graduated with 500+ other people and no way did I know them all, but we have a connection just the same. I did know everyone in my neighborhood and I hope the same for this year's graduates. Even if you went to different high schools, I hope you feel a connection to the others in the Bryn Mawr Neighborhood Class of 2015!

Congratulations to you, your parents. Go out in the world knowing that the readers of the Bryn Mawr Bugle celebrate your accomplishments and wish you a bright future.

Marion Notaro wrote this for the January Bugle in 1976. Marion had a gift store where Bryn Mawr pizza is. At one point, she managed to be a Post Office - and sold stamps! It was a great service to the community. If you have historic information or photos that you would like to share with the Bugle, please email Kevina Munnich at kmunnich@gmail.com.

ELLA YE (BRYN MAWR'S LONGEST RESIDENT) REMEMBERS by Marion Notaro

Wednesday, November 11, Ella Ye, 36 Queen Ave. So., celebrated her 82nd birthday.

In the spring, when Ella (Meme) Ye was 11 years old her family decided to move from Minnehaha to Horseshoe (Browne) Lake.

"I remember it well," said the tiny, white-haired alert Ella.

"Dad had a dairy farm. He and two men drove the horses on clay roads to the new place. With him went Chris Ewald, a neighbor, but he went further north and settled in McNair. Mother rode on one wagon with the furniture. Sister, Ann, and I came out on the tiny horse-drawn streetcar that turned on Oliver Ave.

Cedar Lake Road was paved with wood blocks. No other roads were graded. There was much mud. Woods were cut through with paths that led to a sprinkling of farm houses. Dominating all was a big, red house with a smaller second house on Upton between Laurel and Cedar Lake Road. A man named Holloron lived there with his two sisters. From Upton to Sheridan to the Boulevard was a huge golf ground. Across from where we live now (36 Queen) was a gravel pit. Glenwood Avenue was called Western Avenue

We rented a big house near the lake and had a 30-40 cow dairy farm. "No," I never swam in Horseshoe Lake as we were warned it was bottom-less. We did have many picnics there. One of the scandals was that boys jumped off the bridge naked.

On the hill was a cornfield. It is now called North Tyrol. South Tyrol was a pig farm. The man who owned it boarded at our house. He collected garbage from the downtown cafes to feed the pigs until a law was passed that all garbage had to be covered to prevent the spread of TB. My sister and I sat on the ground where North Tyrol Hills are now and shucked corn for 3¢ a bushel. Our hands were cold. If we helped on the pig farm we could make 35¢ a day.

We churned our own butter and ground our coffee in the warmth from the nickel-plated stove. Firelight flickered through the isin-glass. It was so pretty--I wish we had that today. When the fire flickered one of the adults would put a scuttle of coal on top. Sometimes the wall phone would ring and we'd chat with our neighbors. Our water came from a pump.

We walked in mud to Harrison School. We children could only go Cedar Lake Road, then the Boulevard, and had to stay together. Gypsies used to camp on the point where the Voyager Motel now is.

Sundays we went to the Congregational Church where the Masonic Lodge House now is. Members tied up their horses and buggies.

Sometimes we went blueberry picking. Once with our parents we walked over to McCarthys--then called the First and Last Chance Saloon.

We were not allowed to go to Keegon's Lake (Theodore Wirth) as there was a saloon there. Brawls often resulted in someone being thrown in the lake.

A 50-foot ski jump was located where the Wild Flower Garden is.

In the meantime, our friends, the Ewald brothers, began going door to door with a little horse-drawn wagon. The price was 5¢ a quart to have milk dipped into your pitcher.

In 1913 a typhoid epidemic hit. William Fruen had an acre on the edge of Keegon's Lake. In 1884 while digging a trout pool in a little valley behind his house, he discovered a spring. This was the source of Glenwood-Inglewood water. Glenwood-Inglewood used 35 water wagons during the typhoid epidemic, drawn by 70 horses, to supply people with spring water. The newspapers warned, "Beware! City water contaminated! Do not drink without boiling!"

As I remember, smallpox was more prevalent than TB.

On the hill across from Horseshoe Lake was a TB camp. It consisted of wooden buildings with canvas roofs. We'd see beds with patients scattered across the hillside--even on the coldest days as the theory was they were to get fresh air.

We stayed at Horseshoe Lake three years until the Park Board bought all the property. Dad received $300 from the Park Board, and our hired hand bought the cattle.

Dad then built a white frame house on 232 Sheridan Avenue South (where Robert Nelson, nephew, now lives). Dad took a job with the M. & St.L. Railroad as an oiler.

I dropped out of school at the 8th grade to take a nurse girl job at Lake Minnetonka for $1.50 a week.

When I was sixteen I worked at Ford's General Store on Oliver and Cedar Lake Road for $8 a week. We sold everything from carpet tacks to knife-cut UT Plug tobacco.

I was a tomboy and had lots of boyfriends.

John Ye, who in 1917 became my husband, lived next door. He worked for Columbia Record Co. He was a very quiet fellow, and when I saw him coming I used to go upstairs so he would not ask me for a date. When John was 17, his father suggested he buy a lot across from the gravel pit, and he built the house I've lived in ever since.

Despite 3 heart attacks, Ella had to mount the stairs to show us pictures of her children and grandchildren of whom she is justly proud. "They were all here for my birthday," she beamed, and I received over 30 cards from dear, long-time Bryn Mawr friends.

WHO HAS LIVED IN BRYN MAWR THE LONGEST?

Many have asked what Bryn Mawr was like 20 or 30 years ago. So we are setting out to reconstruct a picture of "olde tyme" Bryn Mawr. We are particularly interested in talking with long-time residents who are willing to share their memories with us. We will send out an interviewer to write the story, or his/her own accounts of everyday activities, special happenings, interesting houses or descriptions of the area are welcome. We would also like to print old pictures.

Call Alan Bruce at 374-1782 or mail material to Bryn Mawr Bugle, 404 South Cedar Lake Road, 55406. We must reserve the right to edit material because of space limitations.

Project SUCCESS in the BWCA

By Marta Fraboni, Director of External Relations at Project SUCCESS

Each summer, Project SUCCESS offers a very special seven-day canoe trip to the Boundary Waters Canoe Area for middle school students. The BWCA Adventures experience takes everything students learn and practice in Project SUCCESS' in-class workshops at their school, and condenses it into a seven day summer experience. It builds upon skills and confidence students have gained in Project SUCCESS' program, and gives them a real-life experience to apply those skills, which carry over and add value to their academic experience and other real-world settings.

Students learn to work together to paddle and portage canoes, set up and break down camp, cook their own food and clean up without making an impact on the natural environment. They develop positive skills such as goal-setting, leadership, teamwork, and communication, and they build confidence and respect for the awesome beauty of the wilderness and a simple way of life. Mostly they come home with a huge sense of accomplishment that has an amazing impact on their educational and personal growth.

RECENT AWARD FOR BWCA PROGRAM

Gov. Mark Dayton proclaimed May 21 as Character Recognition Day in Minnesota. In celebration, Synergy & Leadership Exchange presented awards to 12 schools and four community programs for excellence in character development at the Character Recognition Awards ceremony at the State Capitol. Project SUCCESS received a 2015 Minnesota Ethical Leadership Award (MELA) for their Boundary Waters Canoe Area Adventures, which recognizes community programs developing positive character and ethical leadership in its participants.

July 1, 2015 Full moon, the Ojibwe strawberry moon. July is our sunniest and warmest month. Gardens produce tomatoes and cucumbers. Young birds test their flight feathers, sometimes with hilarious results. Birds sing from about 1/2 hour before sunrise to about 1/2 hour after sunset. Most of the singers are males, and if you listen carefully you can hear that even within a species some birds have more complicated songs than others. This is learned behavior that apparently is attractive to females.

July 9, 2000 Bassett's creek washes out the CP railroad tracks under Glenwood Avenue after a 3 inch cloudburst. The Army Corps of Engineers had built a narrow concrete channel to contain the creek and drain the slough north of Glenwood and west of Morgan, but as usual nature took its own course. In the 1870s Bassett's Creek was described as a "meandering stream with marshy banks winding its way from Medicine Lake to the Mississippi."

July 25, 2009 Solar eclipse over SE Asia and the Pacific. We'll experience one here in August 2017.

July 31, 2015 Full moon, the Ojibwe midsummer moon. The second full moon in a calendar month is called a "blue moon".
